

Olin Arts Noonday Concert
November 28, 2006
Piano and Saxophone
David Wells and Steve Grover

Student Reactions:

Katie: Today's concert was lively. David Wells and Steve Grove are musicians. David had to snap his fingers to let Steve know to start. The saxophone is as curved as a banana. The music I heard today reminds me of the time when I was in dance camp and I danced to jazz music. They are very talented. They played some of the music softly. Steve played background music. I could glide to the music. They could manage to play well. It was very playful music.

Colin: Today's concert was very restful. David Wells was a very good saxophone person and Steve Grover is a very good pianist too. If I could play the piano and saxophone I would go across the world and try to be famous. I wonder if they are famous or went around the world like what I might do if I learned how to play an instrument.

Izrael: Today's concert was great. I didn't know that the saxophone was made of brass. The background music played by the grand piano sounded awesome. I also think the instruments sounded terrific playing jazz. I noticed that sometimes the music sounded high toned and low to me, mostly high to me. Also, that sometimes it was slow and fast. I think the musicians were talented.

Kristina: The music today was great! It sounded like the piano was the background music. The piano played softly. David and Steve were musicians. They are talented. They are two gentlemen. They played lively. Steve Grover was playing the grand piano. David snapped to tell when to start playing. One of the songs was like a jazz one. David played the saxophone. And Steve Grover played the piano.

Nadine: I loved it at Olin Arts today. David Wells had to stand up because he played the saxophone. He kept on swaying back and forth. Oh yeah, I forgot to tell you that they were two gentlemen. The music they were playing was jazz. The piano was like the background music. The music was very alluring. Steve Grover was wearing spectacles. Both of them snapped before they began. I started to glide in my seat. Steve Grover arched back and forth. They are very talented. Anyway, the music I heard today reminds me of the time when I was changing the radio and it got stuck on jazz. Did you know the saxophone is as curved as a snake? But anyway, this was the best Olin Arts ever.

Jordan: Two gentlemen played today. They were swaying back and forth. I think the music was jazz. The music had a lot of high tones. I think the saxophone is made of brass. The piano was background music to the saxophone, I think. The saxophone player always went snap! every time they began to play.

Allison: Today's concert was two gentlemen. They were playing the piano and saxophone. Also, they looked very talented. I liked it when one of them on every beginning he would breathe, then snap. The other one had a high tone. I enjoyed the saxophone because it was restful for me. The music I heard today reminds me of the time when I watched a movie. I liked it when he arched back and forth. I loved the background music. Also, I liked it when the piano player played softly. It looked like a playful. The concert was great!

Krysta: Today's concert had two gentlemen who played the saxophone and piano. One of the men had spectacles just like me. The saxophone is curved like a snake bending. I also enjoyed the saxophone because it was so peaceful. The saxophone is made of brass. The piano player was pretty good. He was playing a grand piano. The piano player was doing the background music I think. Olin Arts is cool. When Steve played, it sounded like he vibrated. Before they played, they snapped their fingers.

Avara: I really enjoyed the concert today. It was so lively. I think the background music was piano. I liked this concert the most because it was jazz and I love it. I'd like the saxophone the most because it's like a classic. It was restful to sit there and listen to the music. Before the concert, the guy would snap. It was high toned and very loud. The last one was very softly played. They are very talented. I think they're good musicians. I like the sax because it is a classic. The sax is curved like Santa's hat.
